

ABSTRACT

Provided with at least a file input section 10 that inputs image files from a digital camera or its media, a number of pixels comparing section 12 that compares the number of pixels in the image file that has been input with a prescribed number of pixels having a higher resolution than the normal number of pixels of the standard, when the number of pixels are different, a number of pixels conversion section 13a that converts that image file, irrespective of the number of pixels in the original image file, so that its number of pixels becomes equal to a prescribed number of pixels, a file format conversion section 13b that converts an image file into a format in which the file can be reproduced by the image reproduction device, and a file recording section 14 that records the converted image file, or the converted image file and the input image file, and can always record the image file in the recording medium with a large number of pixels.